Notes on Contributors

DAVID FARMER is Professor of History and Department Head at St Thomas More College in the University of Saskatchewan, where he has taught since 1970. He wrote the chapters on prices and wages, and on marketing, for the two medieval volumes of the Agrarian History of England and Wales. He has been working for several years on the economic value of woodland in the medieval economy, and plans to complement this with a study of pasture management and hay production.

JEAN BIRRELL was for many years Deputy Regional Director of the Open University in the West Midlands, and is now an Honorary Fellow of the Institute of Advanced Research in the Humanities, in the University of Birmingham. She has published several articles on aspects of royal forest and woodland history.

DR JUNE A SHEPPARD is Reader Emeritus in Geography at Queen Mary and Westfield College, University of London. Her earlier published work was mainly concerned with aspects of rural settlement and field systems in Yorkshire. She is currently researching nineteenth-century rural working-class housing in Sussex.

DR C J D DUDER gained his PhD in African history in 1978 from the University of Aberdeen. He currently teaches European history at the University of Victoria, British Columbia, Canada. Apart from publishing a number of articles on various aspects of white settlement in Kenya, Dr Duder is now engaged in writing a social history of the Titanic disaster.

DR A T FEAR is a former Junior Research Fellow at Jesus College, Oxford, and currently Lecturer in Roman History at the University of Keele. His main academic interests lie in the Western provinces of the Roman Empire, particularly those of the Iberian peninsula. He is presently working on a book on gladiatorial games.

DR RICHARD HOYLE is a British Academy post-doctoral research fellow at Magdalen College, Oxford. He is a member of the Executive Committee of the Society and acts as organizer of the its autumn conferences. He has interests in many aspects of the economic and social history of the early modern period. The collection of essays he edited, The Estates of the English Crown, 1558-1640 CUP, has just appeared: amongst continuing projects is a study of the role of the equity courts in the regulation of tenurial change before 1640.

DR ALUN HOWKINS is a Senior Lecturer in History in the School of Cultural and Community Studies at the University of Sussex, where he has taught since 1976. He is the author of Reshaping Rural England 1850-1925, 1991, and Poor Labouring Men, 1985.
