

Notes on contributors

JAMES P. BOWEN is currently the Contributing Editor for the Herefordshire Victoria County History Trust Short publication on the parish of Colwall. He was formerly a Postdoctoral Research Associate based at the Department of Geography and Planning, University of Liverpool and worked on 'Spaces of experience and horizons of expectation: the implications of extreme weather events, past, present and future', a three-year project (2013–16), funded as part of the Care for the Future programme of the Arts and Humanities Research Council (AHRC). He completed a Ph.D. at Lancaster University supervised by Professor A. J. L. Winchester and held the Economic History Society's Tawney Junior Research Fellowship at the Institute of Historical Research, London in 2012–13. Email: J.P.Bowen@liverpool.ac.uk.

A former President of the Society, E. J. T. (TED) COLLINS is Emeritus Professor of Rural History in the Department of Agricultural and Food Economics at the University of Reading, and was for many years Director of the Rural History Centre (now the Museum of English Rural Life). He has published extensively in Britain and Europe across a variety of fields in nineteenth and twentieth century rural, agricultural and food history – farm labour, hand tools, mechanization, draught power, and rural industries, in particular, the coppice and under-wood crafts, as well as cereal foods and dietary change. He is editor of The Agrarian History of England and Wales, VII, 1850–1914 (2000), and of the highly acclaimed report, combining history and contemporary analysis, Crafts in the English Countryside (2004), for the Countryside Agency.

DAVID CROUCH is Professor of Medieval History in the University of Hull. His research interests are focused on the social and political history of the period 1000–1300. Recent publications include The English Aristocracy, 1070–1272: A Social Transformation (Yale UP, 2011); Lost Letters of Medieval Life: English Society, 1200–1250 (Pennsylvania UP, 2013), and The Acts and Letters of the Marshal Family 1156–1248 (Camden Society, 5th series, 47, 2015). His interest in Wallingfen stems from his work as current Director of the Victoria County History of the East Riding. He is a fellow of the British Academy.

VINCENT GELOSO is an economist currently affiliated with Texas Tech University as a postdoctoral fellow. He specializes in economic history, law and economics and demographics. Address: 1901 University Avenue, Suite 308, Lubbock, TX, 79410, USA; email: vincentgeloso@hotmail.com.

MAIKA DE KEYZER is a postdoctoral researcher at Utrecht University, working in the ERC project, 'Coordinating for Life'. In her PhD (The Common Denominator. The survival of the commons in the late medieval Campine area), she dealt with the question of how peasant communities were able to manage commons sustainably in an inclusive society. Her current research focuses on the social causes of natural disasters, in particular sand drifts, in the cover sand belt regions in England, Belgium and the Netherlands. Address: Wittevrouwenstraat 7bis, 3512 CS, Utrecht; email: M.dekeyzer@uu.nl.

ALEXIS LACOMBE is an economist, teaching industrial organization, international trade and environmental economics at Cégep de Granby, Granby, Quebec, Canada. Address: 235 St-Jacques St., Granby, Qc., J2G9H7; email: alacombe@cegepgranby.qc.ca.

JOHN MARTIN is Professor of Agrarian History at De Montfort University, Leicester. His main research interest is the impact of government policies on British agriculture and the countryside since the 1930s. His research has focused on the history of food security with particular regard to the impact of and legacy of the state sponsored agricultural revolution which took place since the Second World War. He has also investigated the way that droughts and cold winters have affected food production, as well as the changing role of the countryside. Address: School of Humanities, De Montfort University, The Gateway, Leicester, LE1 9BH; email: jfmartin@dmu.ac.uk.

BRIONY MCDONAGH is a lecturer in historical and cultural geography at the University of Hull. She has published widely on enclosure and the commons, on the geographies of riot and rebellion, and on women's histories. She is author of Elite Women and the Agricultural Landscape, 1700–1830 (Routledge, 2017) and co-editor of Hull: Culture, History, Place (Liverpool University Press, 2017). She is Chair of the Historical Geography Research Group of the Royal Geographical Society (with IBG) and co-PI of the University of Hull's Gender, Place and Memory research cluster. email: B.McDonagh@hull.ac.uk

ELINE VAN ONACKER is a postdoctoral research fellow (FWO Flanders) at the University of Antwerp. In her PhD (Village elites and social structures in the fifteenth- and sixteenth-century Campine area, Brepols, forthcoming) she dealt with inequality and social stratification with a peasant region. Her current research focuses on the redistribution, poor relief and inequality on the countryside of the Low Countries, and on how different types of communities dealt with periods of grain crisis. Address: S.R-A.112, Rodestraat 14, 2000 Antwerpen; email: eline.vanonacker@uantwerpen.be